

June 15, 2005

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

NEXTBUZZ COMMUNITY SITE LAUNCHED
Portal Offers Communications Forum For Schools, Businesses And
The Public

Santa Monica, California, June 15, 2005 – nextbuzz.com announced the launch of a new Southern California communications web portal. The new site, nextbuzz.com offers a forum where schools, businesses and the public can connect and exchange information on services, entertainment, local jobs and events. Since the information exchanged is regionalized, the site addresses each major city in the Valley, LA County, Orange County, and San Diego separately. Users can post information relating to the featured topics at no cost within their chosen communities.

“Like many busy mothers, I need a dynamic source of information – one which offers detailed information about topics important to my family, such as baby-sitters, school events and classroom needs” said Natalie Saye. “Our local neighborhood circular just isn’t up to the task. By the time it is printed and delivered, most of the information is already out of date. Since nextbuzz.com is dynamic, I now have a great source of up-to-date information at my disposal. I can even post an ad and have a handful of folks contact me within a few hours.”

“We are indeed very pleased that nextbuzz.com is meeting the needs of our local community” said Azita Fadakar, nextbuzz.com’s president. “By providing an information distribution portal at no cost to our users, we hope to make it easier for everyone to connect effortlessly.”

For additional information about nextbuzz.com, please visit www.nextbuzz.com.

About nextbuzz

nextbuzz.com offers a local forum where communities, schools and businesses can connect. Founded in 2005, nextbuzz.com grew from a need to disseminate accurate information about events, schools and jobs on a timely basis in the Westside. It has quickly grown to service the communications needs of Southern California.

nextbuzz.com is a wholly owned subsidiary of Darian Financial Corporation.